Greetings in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ!

As many of you know, Michelle and I went to see the Phillies on the Wednesday after Easter. It was the first time we were able to attend a game in a long time, mostly because of the same reason we all haven't done things as normal!

There of course were changes. You had to wear a mask in the ballpark unless you were eating food. We were seated in "pods", which meant that while our seats were open, the ones around us were closed with zip ties. They even had a mask around the snout of the Phillie Phanatic! In between innings, the ushers would come down to the front of each section, and they would have signs reminding people that masks were required. As a result of some seats being closed off, there weren't nearly as many people attending as would have been normal.

For me, I was having a great time. I was back in the ballpark, one of my favorite places in the entire world, and we were lucky enough to be there for a Phillies win.

For Michelle, however, this was the first time in quite awhile she was out in public with people. We have been worshipping in person since before I arrived. Michelle, at that point, had just had her first service with in person worship on Easter Sunday, and most people in her congregation still elected to attend online. As such, she was much less comfortable with the situation than I was, even though we were both vaccinated. She eventually settled in, but her first reaction was one of hesitation. Should I even be doing this?

We are now at the point where we are regularly addressing what returning to more and more of a normal fashion might look like. More and more of us are getting vaccinated. This month, in May, we will have our first coffee hour in a long time as we celebrate the confirmation of three intelligent young people. Yes, there will be some alterations because of the time we are in, but this is yet one more "normal" thing that is being added back in. Some people may want it to look exactly like it did before. Others may choose not to attend because they are not ready for such an event yet.

I think as we continue to assess and adjust, we need to think about our faith and what it urges us to think about.

As Lutherans, we are all about grace. Part of living gracefully is understanding that we don't all come from the same train of thought. Part of living gracefully is being patient when people don't have the same reaction to something that we do. Carrying out grace means that we try to be empathetic, which means that we try to think of how someone could come to a different conclusion than ourselves.

So, for those who are growing impatient and want normalcy back now (and we're all really here, we just disagree on whether we should do certain things yet): Hang on. Every step is restoration. It won't happen in an instant, but slowly and surely, we will get there

For those who are hesitant with what you might feel is moving too fast: Do not feel afraid to voice your opinion. Your voice is needed, and I believe wholeheartedly that the Holy Spirit works through all of us, so your voice could be what we need at a certain time.

Grace, patience, and understanding. These are the things that will carry us through.

See you along the Way,
 Pastor Brian Beissel

Beautiful weather with just a bit of wind to make the day interesting sanctified us at the annual egg hunt this year. We had 30 cars including 63 children attend the drive-thru egg hunt on Saturday, April 3rd. The bunny was present for waves and a few pictures. Each child received a bag of treats and additional snacks, a coloring page with blessings, and a quick halt to hunt a few Easter eggs. Thank you to all the volunteers that made this event possible for the children of our church and community.

Searching for the Spirit

By Erin Strybis www.livinglutheran.org

It's Sunday afternoon, and my son, Jack, and I have arrived at the woods for what I call "nature church." Once a month, we put on hiking shoes and visit a forest preserve to witness the beauty of God's creation. Brown leaves carpet the earth and barren branches scrape against an opaque sky—today creation looks a little haunted.

"Look at all that water!" I say, shaking my head and pointing to the fat puddles obscuring our path. "Maybe we should go home?"

"No!" Jack shouts, barreling through the damp underbrush. "This way, Mommy."

We plunge into the woods, and puddles greet us at every turn. Jack isn't discouraged. He twists and weaves and gallops onward, all the while calling, "Follow me!"

I'm trying to teach my son how to notice the Spirit in nature, but the lack of sun and the stinging wind make me think that the Spirit has actually settled indoors with a book and a hot beverage, and perhaps we should too.

Now Jack is climbing over a fallen tree and urging me to do the same. A patch of emerald green catches my eye, and I wave him back to admire it. He leans in close, strokes the moss with his hand and remarks, "Whoa, this is cool."

I smile. "Isn't it nice to see a touch of color? But you have to slow down to appreciate it, you know," I say.

Poet Mary Oliver wrote: "Listen, maybe such devotion in which one holds the world in the clasp of attention isn't the perfect prayer, but it must be close." As Jack and I huddle together, heads bent to the moss, I realize we've adopted a posture of prayer. I want to tell him this moss is evidence of God's handiwork, but he is already ambling toward a giant hill. He is growing so fast, just as they said he would, and I wonder if he is taking in any of this. Have I said enough about God? Will he remember this practice?

When Jack reaches the hilltop, he bellows, "Look at me, Mommy!" I raise my eyes and catch my breath. Amber sunlight engulfs his face, and the surrounding leaves look like a pool of copper pennies. My son whips down to the bottom, giggling with delight. "Your turn!" he says.

"Oh, I don't know about that," I answer, still shaken by the transformation. This is what I need to pay attention to: my shining son, the leaves, his laughter, the gift of this day. Surely the Spirit is here.

"Follow me, Mommy," Jack says, grabbing my hand and tugging me to the hill. So, I do.

Practices

- Nature walk: With your children, hunt for beauty in the natural world. Point out what inspires awe and allow yourself to be surprised by what they show you.
- Picnic devotional: Enjoy a family picnic in your backyard or at a nearby park. Bring along your favorite prayer, spiritual poem and/or Bible story to enjoy with your meal.

Easter Food Baskets

This year, we were able to provide Easter dinner with a few extras to 13 families within our community due to the plentiful donations from the congregation of St. Peter's. Each family received a ham and all the "fixings" for a delicious meal. We are thankful to be able to give and share this love and generosity to families in need during the holiday seasons.

DRIVE-IN MOVIE

The Youth Ministry committee will be playing MOANA at the church "drive-in theatre" on Saturday, May 8th beginning at 7:30 pm. We will be having a themed event!

Food, individually wrapped snacks, popcorn and drinks will be provided free of charge to all who attend. This event is open to the community. Drive in and have fun!
